erence items like height, proportion, and color, and do not concern yourself about the priority order of the list.

6. Review and discuss regularly.

Be prepared to revise your "ten," always referencing, not replacing, those descriptors from the standard.

7. See Step 6 before, during, and after judging.

8. Repeat regularly Steps 1-7.

A basic understanding of canine anatomy is required, as is an acceptance that in most cases, form actually does follow purpose and function. Your "ten" will not replace the standard, but when used effectively, it will enable you to prioritize and intelligently discuss decisions in the ring – yours and others. These are not just your priorities, they are your priorities lifted from the breed standard.

Once you've made your list of phrases, you may wish to underline key words within each phrase if it helps your recall. The goal is to be concise, but adherence to the standard is more important than brevity. For example, in the Portuguese Water Dog, if you get "robust," but miss "unexaggerated," the Ten may take you in the wrong direction. Here's an example of a Ten List for this wonderful breed:

1. A swimmer and diver of exceptional ability.
2. Robust, yet unexaggerated.
3. Rugged.
4. Well-knit, in body.
5. Substantially boned and muscled, yet medium in build.
6. Spirited disposition.
7. Stamina to work a full day in or out of the water.
8. Alert guard, yet obedient.
9. Thickly-based and powerful tail used purposely as a rudder.
10. Distinctively large, well-proportioned head; exceptional breadth of topkull.

Now in or about the ring, you remember that the Portuguese Water Dog is...A robust (yet unexaggerated) and rugged swimmer packaged in a medium and well knit body (of substantial bone and muscle) with a powerful tail and a distinctive head that is both alert and obedient, and has the spirit and stamina to fulfill a full day's work on land and water.

Yes! That's it. The Portuguese Water Dog is an indelible impression of strength, spirit, and soundness!

"Ten to type" emphasizes salient breed characteristics, be they purposeful and powerful or delightful and dainty. Beyond sound exhibits that meet the basics, the "ten" rewards type – the character, the temperament, and the presence that uniquely separate one breed from another. Miss these, and we will simply sort dogs in the generic fashion. Generally speaking, that's not our priority!

Type your ten. Share them at global-fone@aol.com.
